

The Broadmoor Skating Club

Born in 1938 with the opening of the cherished and never forgotten Broadmoor World Arena, the iconic Broadmoor Skating Club is the world's most famous figure skating club, one that spans seven decades of excellence at every level of the sport. It has produced Olympic Champions Hayes Alan and David Jenkins, Peggy Fleming and Colleen O'Connor and Jim Millns, as well as silver medalists Karol and Peter Kennedy and bronze medal winners James Grogan and the Jenkins brothers, plus coaching legend Carlo Fassi. The venerable arena hosted the 1957, 1959, 1965, 1969 and 1975 World Championships, stamping Colorado Springs forever as one of the sport's most famous locales. The Club has sent scores of skaters to the Olympic Games as well as its champions, like Tina Noyes, Jill Trenary, Caryn Kadavy, Tim Wood and Tim Brown, and developing current stars Rachael Flatt, Jeremy Abbott, Brandon Mroz and Keauna McLaughlin-Rockne Brubaker. It has produced over 200 national champions in its history, a mark that no other club will ever threaten.
